

OFFERTORY LABORATORY: Offering is not and should not be just about how best to get the money into the plate. Without valuing one more than the other, we must take seriously the fullness of what we offer back to God in our individual and communal time, talents AND treasures. This focus must not just be in words, but in the rituals and practices that we engage in during worship. In this workshop, we will actually workshop a few models for the offering moment in worship. We will roll-play a few ideas and then see what bubbles up. Bruce will bring a few ideas collected from his experience leading worship as well as from the larger online community with whom he interacts, but you are also invited to bring ideas that you have always wanted to try . . . and we'll try it! Please be prepared to move, fail, discover, reflect, then do it all over again. | breyeschow@gmail.com

	ASSUMPTIONS AND HOPES VISION	REALITIES AND PRACTICES OBSTACLES	RE-CREATING RITUAL DIRECTION
Culture of Offering
Worship Practices
Offering of Time
Offering of Talent
Offering of Treasure
Use of Technology
Other

